COMMUNICATION.

To the College of Physicians of Philadelphia.

A publication has lately appeared in most of the papers, from the Academy of Medicine, intended to prove that our late fever was generated in our city. The effect of this publication has been, to puzzle and silence many people, but it is to be hoped, not to convince any one that the fever is a native disease of our city.

The citizens look up to your learned and respectable Body, to refute the charges bro't against our city, and thereby to defend its credit and commerce from ruin. It is expected in your answer to the letter of the Academy, that you will not rest the controversy upon your own opinion, nor upon the opinions of medical writers, but upon facts and solid arguments.

Dec. 19. THOUSANDS.

From the EAGLE.

IT is a practice which has been carried to a ludicrous excess, in publishing casual deaths, to caution people against exposing themselves in a like manner; as riding on the tongue of a cart, swallowing too much gingerbread at once, or suffering infants to creep near a boiling tea-kettle. Of this we have a curious example from Stackport, in England.—It runs thus:—"On Sunday last, as Mr. Abner Bendish stood shaving himself at a glass near a table, a cat which happened to be in the room, observing the motion of the razor at his throat, and supposing it only play, leaped upon the table, and, suddenly catching Mr. Bendish by the hand, occasioned him to cut such a gash across his gullet, that his life is nearly despaired of.—This is an awful warning to people not to shave themselves in any room where there is a cat present." John Buttonmaker.

From the Farmer's Weekly Museum.

MR. JEFFERSON.

After an experiment of some years, and after witnessing acts, which in any other government, even that of the Barbary states, would not be followed with any thing like impunity, the mass of American citizens will refuse to re-elect to the second office in this country, a man, whose attachment, objects, religion, philosophy, and morals are wholly French. Mr. Jefferson and his dark compeers, must work hard, for the time approaches, when neither he, nor they shall work.—This vain author, false prophet, and thorough bred Frenchman, at the next election, WILL BE REFUSED BY HIS COUNTRY. When his name is mentioned, or his pretentions canvassed, before the Federal American, he will exclaim,

"Fellow begone, I cannot brook thy rule,
"Thy arts have made thee a most ugly man."

Even the book of the Philosopher will pass

"In vicum, vendentes thus et odores
"Et piper, et quicquid chartis amicitur ineptis;"

and the man will be remembered by those only who advert to his impracticable, speculative, wicked politics; his intimacy with Benjamin Banneker, the black; his skill in anatomizing spiders; and his learned accuracy in selecting muddy water, as a scientific standard weight.—Indeed, the vanity, or the ignorance of Americans has given to this man a degree of scholarship, which his French-like, superficial acquirements by no means deserve: In Europe his philosophy would be derided, and his learning surpassed, even by a very young boy, the offspring of a Gilbert Wakefield. Those who recollect his antimathematical report on weights and measures, his choice of rain water for a standard, and his childish and toyshop invention of an Epicurean chair, as he called it, will acknowledge the sarcasm and beauty of the following lines.

"In latitude, just forty-five,
"Down a dark cellar did I creep;
"And with my onion rope would strive
"To measure pecks and bushels neat.

"Of kennel water I did weigh
"A pound—and thus a standard found;
"For spite of dirt, dead cats, or hay,
"This pound will always weigh a pound.

"I've made a noble, wriggling chair,
"In which my science I retail,
"And sit LIKE POLITICIAN RARE,
"And move my snout without my tail."

ORIGIN of BUONAPARTE'S EXPEDITION.

AFTER the conquest of Italy, and the truce with the Emperor, the Directory were fearful lest their armies might begin to call upon an empty treasury for compensation for their services. To prevent this, a mighty parade was made of forming the "Army of England;" and the soldiers were encouraged by the alluring picture placed before them of the riches of London, which were to remunerate their services in the most ample manner. In the mean time, to aid the vast preparations, "patriotic gifts" (which were not the least object of the expedition) were invited; and the sight of so many guns and bayonets did not fear to inspire a public spirit, which laid the property of individuals upon the altar of their country. The noise about invading England was still kept up; and the Conqueror of Italy was to fill the measure of his glory by becoming the conqueror of England. Buonaparte was called to Paris; but in vain was he flattered with a view of his future glory—in vain was it gravely proposed to the Councils to decree honors in anticipation of the Conqueror of England—Buonaparte was not to be thus taken in, and the Directory could not get him an inch further on the grand expedition. What was worse, he knew how to appreciate his services, and set up claims which (supported as he was by a formidable phalanx of his myrmidons, whom he had taken care to halt in the neighborhood of Paris) greatly embarrassed the Directory. Barras was the friend of Buonaparte, and supported his claims in the Directory. The case grew desperate, and the other four Directors determined on a desperate remedy: the General and their colleague were destined to the fate which Carnot had lately received from the arm of Barras himself. Barras, however, familiar with the principles on which the Directory acted, discovered the design; and, on the day on which it was to have been executed, forced his way with pistols to the session room of the Directory, in spite of the centinels, who had orders to prevent him. He then threatened his colleagues with the revenge of a formidable military force, then at hand, if the least outrage were offered to him or the General; and at the same time proposed a compromise, by permitting and aiding Buonaparte to collect a fleet at Toulon, and to proceed on a secret expedition of his own in their name and under their authority. This was agreed to; but even the Directory themselves knew not its object till after its departure from Toulon. The subsequent capture of Malta, the descent on Egypt, the opposition from the Egyptians, and the destruction of the French fleet, are well known; and it may now be a question, whether Buonaparte's fate on the banks of the Nile will not be more hapless, than that which was intended for him in the Channel of England, or afterwards at Paris.

Domestic Articles.

ALBANY, December 14.

It is owing, in a great measure, to neglect of a due examination of the conduct of our public Agents, and to a want of thorough investigation of the measures which they have adopted, that Jacobinism yet retains a foothold on the surface of the American soil. Too well is it known to the few of the faction who labour to sap the foundations of Government, and who would gladly supplant the Rulers of the Free, even through the medium of French aid, that no inconsiderable portion of the people are capable of being acted upon:—Cavil at this, ye vile caitiffs, devoted to disorganization and hurly burly, proclaim to the class designated, that they are treated as a "herd," by the "aristocrats,"—and that the assumption of delegated power, and the usurpation of authority vested in a representative Government, are the necessary steps to the introduction of halcyon days, and to the predominance of a system which shall entice to man the blessings of a prophesied millennium:—too well, I say it is known that a portion of the people are capable of being acted upon—it is not meant to be suggested by this that nature in every case is faulty—but the fact is, some will not exercise the reason with which they are endowed—but will devote their time solely to acquirements within a limited sphere, without properly adverting to the source which enables them to sit each one under his own vine and fig-tree: Should the barriers formed by foreign influence, or domestic faction, check the stream which waters the vine, or cause the leaves of the fig-tree for a moment to droop, let the trumpet of sedition be blown, and Government be pointed at as the origin of the drought and the blight, and but too ready are the last mentioned class to attempt undermining the pillars of a nation's political existence. This truth is known to the leaders of every vile faction—they are convinced that whatever disadvantage or misfortune is brought upon the country by their unprincipled and detested machinations, they can attribute to the measures of government——their duped and despicable tools will echo the sounds of violated rights, infringed constitution, public liberty in danger, and a long list of et ceteras peculiarly calculated to answer the purposes of the demagogues of the day.—But, the Jacobins may be assured that their canting appeals to the passions of a certain class of the people will not answer in this country—they may delude a few—a few may join in the clamour—and a few may be inflamed so far as to point the dagger at the bosoms of those who administer the government which is over us: but the great majority of the people will defend the public guardians and their measures.

The State of New-York in a partial instance. the States of Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, in a more alarming view, have witnessed the ruffian hand of modern "republicanism" raised against the administration of laws enacted by a majority of those to whom the people had delegated the trust of forming such laws:—but what was the result? The proper authorities pointed out the mode, and an insulted majority executed just vengeance on the disturbers of the public tranquility—but a few, it is true graced a haltar, and but a few, comparatively, suffered the confinement of felons—mercy withheld the merited punishment—and experience hitherto has justified the benign dispensation—but mercy has its bounds—and benignity its limits; hardened villainy will not escape, and a repetition of daring crimes, will number the perpetrators with those whose existence is deemed dangerous to the well being of society. Let the deluded of the present day beware—villainy, and disorganization are sporting with their feelings—but when once the standard of rebellion against the laws is erected, the scoundrels who have deceived them will, if the cause becomes hopeless and desperate, as it most assuredly will, leave them to the lash of the law, whilst they themselves seek safety under amnesty acts and oaths of allegiance.—Our government, thank God, emanates from the people; our rulers are chosen by the people: the laws they constitutionally enact are binding upon the people, and the opposers of those laws are traitors to true republicanism—are traitors to our country. At each election the people can proclaim their voice—the conduct of those acting conformable to the authority vested by that choice, should be respected, obeyed, supported. Unless this is the case, republicanism is a farce, and the only government that can be maintained is that of a tyrant who can point the greatest number of bayonets towards the breasts of the people.

It is a fact with which the public mind ought properly to be impressed, that the additional taxes assessed by the national government, are in some degree rendered necessary in consequence of the conduct of those who would palm themselves upon the community for Republicans, friends to the rights of the people, &c. &c. It is owing to the impediments this class have thrown in the way of our national proceedings, that the American character was reduced to so low an ebb, as to invite the insults and depredations of France towards us, and which induced a belief with the Directory of the Great Nation, that their measures could be pursued with impunity. Had not the wheels of government been clogged with the clay of Jacobinism——had that manly and firm tone been adopted at an earlier period, which has at length reduced the tyrants of the French to lower their notes, and even to deny (the clearest proofs to the contrary notwithstanding) that a part of their infamous conduct towards us was unauthorised, millions of dollars would have been in circulation among us, which now contribute to pamper the pirates and freebooters of the great nation; and the commerce of our country would have been permitted to extend in such a manner, that the duties arising therefrom would very probably have superceded the necessity of a tax on houses and lands.

NEW-YORK, December 18.

COMMUNICATION.

Citizen L—— has no sooner arrived in town, than we hear of some democratic movements. A meeting is called at a well known house to-morrow evening, at which it is expected all good republicans—patriots of '76—exclusive guardians of the rights of the people are desired to attend, as some business of great importance is to be laid before them. There are some persons though despicable in talents, yet of consummate impudence—of inflexible perseverance, of artful address, and of desperate purpose, who ought to be watched in all their actions—traced through all their windings, and ferreted out of every secret alley and lurking place, to which their dark designs may lead them; some plot, deep of root, extensive in its ramifications, and of hellish hue, is forming—may a timely discovery prevent the meditated blow from falling on the heads of the conspirators themselves.

From evidence incontestible, it appears, that the views of the revolters and rebels in Ireland were not pointed to Parliamentary reform or Catholic emancipation, but to an absolute separation from and independence of Great Britain, the erection of a republic on the French model, the destruction of all religious establishments, and an alliance with France. At the very time, it also appears, that Earl Moira was pleading the cause of these Innocents, in the Irish House of Peers, and stating that they only wished for a fair participation of rights, such as were enjoyed by their fellow subjects in England; on the same day, did the Irish Executive Directory resolve, that nothing which might be done by Parliament, should divert them from the objects above mentioned.

At the revolution in 1688, the population of Ireland was commuted at One Million and a half. At the commencement of the present year, it was admitted to be full five millions. And all political writers say, that the increase of Population in a Country, is the strongest proof in favour of the government being well conducted, and attentive to the happiness of its subjects.

In fact, the leaders of the late rebellion acknowledge that the condition of the people in Ireland has been progressively ameliorated; but they add, that their Country is now too powerful to be an Appendage to any other State; and that they had expected this sentiment would have so universally pervaded their countrymen, as to ensure effecting the establishment of their independence.

NEWARK, December 18.

To All Malcontents.

A law is now in force, in the state of Virginia passed in the year 1792, which enacts, "That it shall and may be lawful for the governor, with the advice of the council of the state, to be apprehended and secured, or compelled to depart this common wealth, all suspicious persons, being the subjects of any foreign power or state, who shall have made a declaration of war or actually commenced hostilities against the said states, from whom the President of the United States shall apprehend hostile designs against the said states, provided information thereof shall have been previously received by the executive from him; and in such cases the governor, with the advice of the council of state shall and he is hereby empowered to send for the person and papers of any foreigner within this state, in order to obtain information as he shall judge necessary. "All sheriffs and goalers shall receive such suspicious persons whom by warrant from the governor they shall be commanded to receive, and them in their prisons or custody to detain or transport out of the common wealth, as by such warrant may be commanded."

Between the alien law of the United States and this law of the state of Virginia there is no collision. Their aim and policy is, in principle the same; and the latter is no more a violation of the constitution of the state, than the former a violation of the constitution of the United States. Each is alike constitutional; and of the two the Virginia law is the most arbitrary; yet these Virginians murmur at the law of the United States.

The Gazette.

PHILADELPHIA,

THURSDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 20.

The following are the Resolutions of the Legislatures of Massachusetts and Connecticut, mentioned in the Governor's address to the Legislature of this Commonwealth.

COMMONWEALTH of MASSACHUSETTS.

Boston, July 12th, 1798.

SIR,

THE two branches of the Legislature of this Commonwealth have thought it highly necessary, that some constitutional barrier should be opposed to the introduction of foreign influence into our National Councils, and have requested me to transmit the enclosed Resolutions to the Supreme Executive of the several States of the Union, that the same may be submitted to the consideration of their respective Legislatures, in order that the constitution of the United States may be so amended, as to effect, more fully, the great objects for which it was designed.

The Legislature of this Commonwealth, strongly impressed with the necessity of the measure, have thought it expedient to take this preparatory step; and it is hoped, when the Legislature of the State, over which you have the honor to preside, shall be in session, and contemplate the importance of the subject, this Commonwealth will find itself greatly supported by a concurrence in the measure. To their wisdom it is submitted.

I must take the liberty of requesting your Excellency to inform me of the determination of the Legislature of your State upon the subject, as soon as it shall be known.

I have the honour to be,
with the highest respect,
your Excellency's
very humble servant,
INCREASE SUMNER.

His Excellency GOVERNOR MIFFLIN.

COMMONWEALTH of MASSACHUSETTS.

In the HOUSE of REPRESENTATIVES,

June 28th, 1798.

WHEREAS it is highly expedient that every constitutional barrier should be opposed to the introduction of foreign influence into our national councils, and that the constitution of the United States should be so amended, as to effect and secure, in the best manner, the great objects for which it was designed:

Resolved, That the Senators and Representatives of this Commonwealth in the Congress of the United States be, and they are hereby, requested to use their best endeavors, that Congress propose to the Legislatures of the several States the following amendment to the Constitution of the United States, viz, That (in addition to the other qualifications prescribed by the said Constitution) no person shall be eligible as President or Vice-President of the United States, nor shall any person be a Senator or Representative in the Congress of the United States, except a natural born citizen, or unless he shall have been a resident in the United States, at the time of the declaration of independence, and shall have continued either to reside within the same, or to be employed in its service, from that period to the time of his election.

And whereas the spirit of amity and mutual concession, which procured the federal constitution, ought always to be cultivated in the proposition and adoption of any amendments to the same:

Resolved, further, That in case the Senators and Representatives of this State in Congress shall find that the amendment, above proposed, is not perfectly conformable to the wishes and sentiments of a constitutional majority of both branches of the National Legislature, they are hereby empowered and requested so to modify the same, as to meet the sentiments of such majority; provided, however, and it is the wish and opinion of this Legislature, that any amendment which may be agreed upon should exclude, at all events, from a seat in either branch of Congress, any person, who shall not have been actually naturalized at the time of making this amendment, and have been admitted a citizen of the United States fourteen years, at least, at the time of such election.

Resolved, further, That his Excellency the Governor is hereby requested to communicate the foregoing resolves to the Supreme Executives of the several States, with a request that the same may be submitted to the consideration of their respective Legislatures; and that the President of the Senate and the Speaker of this House be requested forthwith to transmit the same to the Senators and Representatives of this State, in Congress.

New-Haven, November 2, 1798.

SIR,

IN conformity to the request of the Legislature of this state, I have the honor to transmit to your Excellency the copy of a resolution, passed by them at their sessions in October last, proposing measures for obtaining an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

With great regard and respect,
I am, Sir,
Your Excellency's
most obedient servant,
JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

His Excellency GOVERNOR MIFFLIN.

At a General Assembly of the state of Connecticut, holden at New-Haven on the second Thursday of October, A. D. 1798.

A resolution of the Legislature of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, passed the twenty-eighth day of June, A. D. 1798, having been submitted to the consideration of this Assembly, recommending the adoption of measures to obtain an amendment to the constitution of the United States, which shall exclude foreign influence from her councils; and to co-operate with the said commonwealth in the attainment of an object so important to our national independence;

[Here the Resolutions are repeated.]

Resolved further, That his Excellency the Governor be, and he is hereby requested to communicate the foregoing resolve to the Supreme Executive of the several states, and also to transmit the same to the Senators and Representatives in Congress.

A true Copy of Record,
Examined by
SAMUEL WILLYS, Secretary.

MR. FENNO,

IN your paper of yesterday, after a column of virulent abuse against United Irishmen, you have introduced my name among those of sundry persons, who, your readers are given to understand, are members of that association; and thus, with equal decency, truth, and justice, you make me a participator of the abuse you so freely bestow. I am willing, Sir, to take your word, that you were not the compiler of the list, and that in the insertion of it, you acted merely as Editor, without pretending to vouch for its authenticity. But, Sir, let me ask you, how can you reconcile to your duty as publisher of a paper, to attack the character, attempt to injure the interest, and disturb the peace of a fellow-citizen, without fully and satisfactorily ascertaining the truth of the allegations you bring forward? From the very keen sensibility you formerly displayed respecting some strictures upon your father, I should have expected more tenderness for the feelings of others, than you have exercised on this occasion.

To close this lengthy exordium, I now declare unequivocally, that whoever informed you I am a Member of the Society of United Irishmen, is a liar, undeserving of confidence. If I do not apply any harsher epithets, it is not because the writer does not richly deserve them—but because I think a decent regard for the public should forbid the use of such terms as his conduct merits in a newspaper. If the epithet I use, is too hard of digestion, he knows where to apply for a remedy. I never in the whole course of my life attended a meeting of United Irishmen but once, and that was about eighteen months ago.

MATHEW CAREY.

December 19.

MR. FENNO,

Being last night informed that you had mentioned my name in your paper of Tuesday as a member of the society of United Irishmen, I am to request that you will give equal publicity to my refutation of a charge which is at once false and malicious.

I solemnly declare that I never was a member of the society of United Irishmen, either in Ireland or this country; neither was I ever present at any of their meetings, nor even proposed as a member, to my knowledge. I think it necessary, however to mention that I do not make this declaration to remove any supposed odium which may be thought to attach to the members of that society; for I believe the motives and views of that association to be equally laudable and virtuous—so much so, that I should not be deterred from becoming a member, nor from continuing if I had been one, by all the torrents of abuse with which they have lately been honored. My principal view is to shew the public how false your information is with respect to that society, even in what occurs almost under your very nose; it is therefore reasonable to conclude that your statements of the objects and proceedings of remote branches of that association must, at least, be equally erroneous—much more, it appears, they could not be.

I am, Sir,
Yours, &c.
JAMES CAREY.

It is no longer doubted, that a faction, inimical to our country, is busy at work to break, what Mr. Jefferson in his letter to Mazzei, calls the "Lilliputian bands" by which they are held in obedience. These bands are the Federal Constitution! The inhabitants of Brodnignag will find their powers too feeble for this undertaking.

The ship Neptune is on shore at Sandy Hook, and it is not expected she will be got off this winter.

The brig Pomona, Capt. Morton, caught fire on Monday night last, as she lay at Port Penn piers, bound to the Havanna, with a cargo of iron ware and crates. The fire was so rapid that any efforts to save the vessel were useless; she was therefore cut adrift, and floated ashore on Reedy Island, where she burnt to the water's edge. Fortunately no other vessel caught fire, though several lay near her. We have not learned how this accident occurred.

The ship Superior, for Havanna, the Neptune for Cape Francois, and the vessel for Algiers, left Reedy island on Thursday morning.
